finally they asked for a letter from TVBC stating that we did not need planning permission TVBC required us to go through the whole planning process. This took until early this year.

We now have a new boiler working, in the vestry with the flue using the hole left in its West wall by an air vent. The system was designed for us by Dave Smith, a professional surveyor living in the village, and installed by Nigel Harris and his team. Thank you Dave and Nigel. The old asbestos boiler shed has gone as part of the project and we even had to have planning permission to take that away!

ST MARY'S ABBOTTS ANN CHURCH RESTORATION PROJECT UPDATE

Repairs

As was reported before, your PCC spent much time last year trying to get a grant from the Heritage Lottery Fund (HLF) in order to carry out urgent repairs to the church roof, stonework, brickwork and rain water drainage system. We heard in December last that our application for a grant had been successful and we were given an initial grant to carry out the investigative work needed. You may have noticed the scaffolding at the church and the blue marks on the grass showing where the rainwater soakaways are.

The work was completed last month and a Report produced for HLF, together with Tender documentation for the main project, for them to pass on to Historic England (used to be English Heritage) for their approval. Our Architect's Report on the Investigations is available on the Village website for all to read.

The cost schedule for the repair work has no surprises and tallies very closely with that submitted to HLF last August; with an overall budget of about £250,000. We continue to depend on the St Mary's Trust for our contribution to the cost and are most grateful for their support.

Assuming that Historic England are happy with the works proposed in our Tender, our Architect Duncan Wilson will proceed with the Tender process on our behalf and our Project Team, on behalf of the PCC, will prepare the detailed application to submit to the HLF asking for their approval of the major part of the grant needed to enable us to carry out the repairs. All being well, we hope the work will start later this year.

WC Planning

The requirement to provide a WC at the church was included in our first HLF application. The HLF made it clear that unless it was to be in the main building, not possible in our case, it should be taken out. This we did, after agreeing with HLF that we would still progress it as part of our major project whilst making it clear that the funding for it would come from elsewhere. The programme for the investigative works therefore including specifying a separate WC and getting planning approval for it. This was all made possible thanks to the funds raised at an 'Evening with Alan Titchmarsh' organised by Julian and Jane Benson last July. This planning activity is still ongoing.

New Boiler

As many of you know, the old boiler stopped working completely last February. The PCC agreed to progress a replacement boiler as a separate project. Thanks to the generosity of many in the village, Sally Dashwood and Andrew Liddell quickly raised the funds necessary to put a new boiler, connected to the existing heating system, in the vestry. After much discussion with the Diocesan Advisory Committee we got the go ahead. However, when

The Moment of Truth is Now

In the month of the general election - but which seems to have been going on for the past year - we will no doubt, have begun to feel the weight of slogans and promises which has left us feeling not quite knowing who or what to trust. One news programme I recall, had listeners request that election reporting be restricted to just a half-an-hour and the rest of the programme carry on as before and report the news from around the world. But the programme-makers didn't take this seriously! Poor politicians put a lot of effort into persuading a relatively small number of people to vote for them since - at least it has been true in the past - most people habitually vote the same way. Yet, since mistrust in the political process is such a feature of our culture today, and the apparent birth of a multi-party democracy a fruit of this malaise, perhaps the process of electioneering will become more nuanced and authentic in the future.

In these election weeks I came across a rather startling suggestion. 'During the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries,' John Berger wrote, 'most direct protests against social injustice were in prose. They were reasoned arguments written in the belief that, given time, people would come to see reason, and that finally, history was on the side of reason. Today this is by no means clear. The outcome is by no means guaranteed. The suffering of the present and the past is unlikely to be redeemed by a future era of universal happiness. And evil is a constant ineradicable reality. All this means that the resolution - the coming to terms with the sense to be given to life - cannot be deferred. The future cannot be trusted. The moment of truth is now. And more and more it will be poetry, rather than prose, that receives this truth. Prose is far more trusting than poetry; poetry speaks to the immediate wound.' Poetry, he argues, is the one medium today capable of putting into words the unspeakable and unspoken - the 'immediate wound'. It, he suggests, 'incites caring' - what an interesting phrase today in our world of terror - offers an original hope in the face of the predetermined and prefabricated and is able, unlike so much public and private discourse today, to reunite apparent opposites. Reasoned arguments may no longer convince and neither their shorthand of course, which is terror, still, I cannot imagine a politician quite resorting to poetry at the moment. At least not in Britain. Perhaps we might instead encourage the inhabiting of a poetic mind.

I should however, offer a poem itself. I've chosen one about love by a new up-and-coming poet called Zaffar Kunial. Love, by the way, in case you thought this was a cop-out from heady thoughts about an election, Pope Benedict XVI wrote, 'will always prove necessary, even in the most just society. There is no ordering of the State so just that it can eliminate the need for a service of love. ... This love does not simply offer people material help, but refreshment and care for their souls, something which often is even more necessary than material support.' [Deus Caritas Est]. The poem is called 'Q'.

Somewhere (thank you, father) over the hills, through some trap-door in my mind, despite my having no call to speak it, and hearing of it so long ago,
I know the Urdu ishq is love.

And further, how it's the highest (a divine fervour,
a bolt cued from the round heavens - almost angelic)
among a whole host of forms, or feathers, of love
like that myth of subtle Inuit measures of snow and now I've utterly gone and put my foot in it and other shoppers are turning round, as we inch up to the queue's end, still far from those tills,

and she's prodding me to explain my short-falling answer - giving the nod, when she asked If... and Whether...
- she swears that at the end of my assent she heard me whisper
-ish

MONXTON & AMPORT GARDENS

Six charming local gardens are to be open to the public under the National Gardens Scheme on Sunday 24 May and Monday 25 May (Bank Holiday), 1.30 pm to 6.00 pm.

White Gables, Monxton, boasts a young giant redwood and other interesting trees which surround a gently sloping lawn down to the Pill Hill Brook. (No wheelchair access). A two-acre haven for wildlife at Bridge Cottage, Amport, includes a lake, a trout stream and drifts of colour in the informal planting schemes, as well as a plant sale. Amport Park Mews offers an opportunity to see eleven small borders in a communal space within a converted stable block, built in the late nineteenth century by the Marquess of Winchester. Fleur de Lys garden is a series of 'rooms' with glorious herbaceous borders, leading to a large orchard. Gaycorrel is a working garden (half an acre) of a National Vegetable Society judge and fellow. The newcomer this year is Sandleford House with its locally built iron pergola walkway along part of the western boundary, the garden being entirely walled in brick and flint.

Combined admission £5, children free. Proceeds to major caring charities. Teas available at Amport and Monxton village hall, proceeds to St Mary's, Monxton. Parking opposite Amport School. Further information at www.ngs.org.uk.

CLATFORD VALLEY GARDENING CLUB

Even if you only have a small garden there are plenty of ways in which you can grow vegetables according to Geoff. Hawkins, the speaker at the March Meeting of Clatford Valley Gardening Club. but don't aim for self-sufficiency which is practically impossible. Two principles are important, firstly grow only what you like to eat and don't get carried away by seed catalogues. Secondly, plant or sow in succession to avoid a glut of produce, which you might end up having to give away. For example, French beans can be sown at Easter and then every month until July giving a constant supply.

Growing vegetables in containers is a good way in a small garden, this might bring an initial cost but the reward of eating very fresh vegetables is well worth the initial outlay. Also look around to see what you already have that you might be able to use, such as old car tyres piled up. Vegetables can also be grown in the borders, coloured ones such as some lettuce are very useful, and runner beans can also be incorporated.

However you are growing them, vegetables have the same basic requirements, a good compost, water and fertilizers, preferably organic, so a water butt and compost heap are both very useful. When growing on chalk, put the organic matter on the surface and do not dig too deeply to avoid bringing the chalk to the surface. One tip he gave was to germinate carrots and parsnips by placing them in a polythene bag containing moist vermiculite for about 5 days, and when the roots begin to show place them in the drill. They can then be sown more thinly reducing the risk of carrot root fly when thinning later. He ended his talk with a list of varieties that he recommended and a question and answer session.

During the evening members were reminded of the evening visit to Dean House, Kilmeston on 19th May. The May Meeting is on 27th when John Negus will be talking on 'Shrubs of Distinction.

St MARY'S TERCENTENARY

If you saw last month's magazine you will see the PCC is calling a meeting on the 4th June at the church to decide on what celebrations should take place next year to mark the 300 years of our church building

We have had quite a few suggestions but we want the whole village to join in a good excuse to get together as one and rejoice in a church building that is unique in many ways.

We are hoping that this will be a project too large for the PCC to carry out alone - so you are all needed. All the societies - the school, pubs, village hall, etc. can help us so that events can happen throughout the year.

AN AUCTION OF PROMISES IN AID OF RALEIGH INTERNATIONAL

When : 11.30am (after the Eucharist) on 24th May 2015

Where : All Saints Church, Upper Clatford,

This Auction of Promises is to raise money and awareness of the work of Raleigh International. Raleigh works in developing communities, specifically in rural areas and with young people from across the globe with the overall aim of creating globally sustainable futures and communities. I will be travelling to Costa Rica and Nicaragua in the summer months to volunteer with Raleigh International and support their projects. The money raised will go directly to Raleigh International and the projects they run. Please come along and support me - there are some great things to bid for! - so that I can support these communities in Latin America, and raise awareness of Raleigh International.

With sincere thanks,

Sophie Broad.

LIFE WITH THE TRIBE - MARCH 2015

The first day of the month roars in with strong winds and the promise of sleet; it never eventuates but we do have a few crazy weather days including one when the heavens suddenly open and dump enough hail to make it look as though the garden is covered in a blanket (albeit a lightweight, summer one), of snow. The saying that dates back to the 17th Century, "March comes in like a lion, out like a lamb" is rather appropriate. However, the 31st March brings gale warnings from the Met Office across the country and in Hampshire, a tugboat, attached to the Esso oil refinery in Fawley, capsizes and a man has to be rescued. The weather can obviously never be predicted. The rest of the month is relatively dry, not particularly cold and we manage to have our first Sunday roast cooked and eaten outside - bliss! We have to assure our newly arrived Australian au pair, that things are likely to change and the fires will no doubt be burning in the fireplaces in a few days time! Never a dull moment with the British weather.

Daffodils now brighten up everywhere - yellow is most definitely a colour to bring a smile to anyone's face. Even if the sun is deeply hidden beneath clouds, it is a colour of sunshine. Daffodils were originally brought to Britain by the Romans who believed that their sap could heal wounds (this is in fact totally incorrect as calcium oxalate in the sap irritates skin and prevents the flower being eaten by animals). The Latin name for the daffodil family, 'Narcissus' comes from Greek mythology. Narcissus, a handsome Greek man fell in love with his own reflection. The story goes that he fell into a pool of water as he admired his reflection and drowned. The gods changed him into a flower so he could stay by the water forever. Daffodils are also the reason that Hades, god of the Underworld was able to abduct Persephone - she was picking the daffodils that grew in his underworld. The original Greek word was 'asphodel'; the original English word for daffodil came from this - 'Daffodowndilly' - what a shame it's been shortened, although JRR Tolkien did use it in The Lord of the Rings and there's the short, but perfect poem by AA Milne called Daffodowndilly:

She wore her yellow sun-bonnet,
she wore her greenest gown;
She turned to the south wind
And curtsied up and down.
She turned to the sunlight
And shook her yellow head,
And whispered to her neighbour:
"Winter is dead."

The Littlest finds the word very funny, so we might just resurrect it at home. The daffodil (or daffodowndilly as we now know it!), is of course, also the

The first of these, covering cress growing and stream ecology, will take place on Thursday 4th June at 6:30 pm. The second visit, to see (and hear) our local bats and see what has been caught in the moth traps, is provisionally scheduled for Thursday 9th July at 8pm (but this date will be confirmed nearer the time). national flower of Wales, traditionally worn on St David's Day, 1st March. According to Kew Gardens, in the 1980s, daffodils commonly flowered around the 12th February but by 2008 this date had moved to 27th January, 16 days earlier - we've certainly noticed the earlier arrival of the daffodils around Jubilee Oak.

Mid month we have the excitement of the partial eclipse - even the Littlest is involved with the Nursery showing the event via the internet. I have a feeling that she had the best view. The rest of the Tribe are at school, one in Amport, the other two in Salisbury. There is heavy cloud cover everywhere! As I am walking with friends that morning, we notice a slight darkening of the skies as though dusk is falling. The greatest difference is that suddenly there is no birdsong - all the birds are roosting, thinking that night is approaching. The previous eclipse in the UK was in August 1999 and I remember standing with clients on the rooftop of our offices in London; Father of the Tribe was somewhere in the Celtic Sea in the middle of the Fastnet Race. Conditions were definitely better in London that day; this year felt a bit of a letdown in the Test Valley, Salisbury and London, but at least the Tribe all know a lot more about solar eclipses than they did before.

One day, just outside one of the kitchen windows, in amongst the shrubbery, I notice a tiny little bird flitting from branch to branch. It is about 9cm long and has a striking yellow stripe down its black head and its body is olive green. I watch it for a while until the Eldest comes in and exclaims that she has seen the same bird over the last few days. It is a goldcrest (hence its name) and I cannot ever recall seeing one in our garden. We discover that these very pretty, tiny birds weigh about 5g - the same as a 5p coin! Because of their size, during very cold winters, up to 80% of goldcrests can die by the spring. Given our recent mild winter, the goldcrest population should be in good health for the breeding season. They rarely feed at bird feeders, preferring to use the safety of shrubbery where bigger birds are unlikely to be. Long may they stay in our garden.

Our most recent visitors to the garden are a pair of mallards - the Tribe are thrilled. The ducks potter about our lawn - generally only waddling between the wendy house and trampoline and across the driveway to underneath the bird feeder. But they appear every day and are still with us at the end of the month. The cats watch them with a slightly nonchalant air - they are interested, but these feathered beasts are somewhat bigger than the usual garden birds that they stalk, and they are a little uncertain as to what these creatures are. Perhaps they'll fight back. We will see how our duck friends fare next month - maybe they will nest?? Gerald Durrell will definitely have her work cut out.

ABBOTTS ANN VISION

Abbotts Ann Housing Needs Survey

In the community consultation carried out by Abbots Ann Vision, concern was expressed about the inability of young people or the elderly with a local connection to Abbots Ann to obtain affordable or suitable accommodation in the village. This forces such people to leave the village with a consequent loss of continuity in the village community.

Abbots Ann Vision, on behalf of the Parish Council, and with the assistance of Action Hampshire is carrying out a housing needs survey to quantify the extent of such needs. Questionnaires will shortly be delivered to all households in the village. We have defined "the village" as those parts of the Parish within which a local connection would be required in order to qualify for any housing built as a result of the survey. That means all parts of the Civil Parish of Abbots Ann except those on the Andover side of the A303.

As well as helping to quantify housing need the questionnaire will enable all households in the village to express an opinion on the subject and we hope that all will take the opportunity of doing so.

THE OLD COACH ROAD

The Abbots Ann Vision Countryside Group is working towards claiming the Old Coach Road as a public Right of Way. Although it has been used by the public for a very long time, on foot, horseback and horse-drawn vehicle, it is not however recorded as a Right of Way, and access could be closed off at any time by the owners.

In order to have the track added to the Hampshire definitive map as a Right of Way, and to maintain public access, we need to collect evidence of unimpeded use during the last 20 years from as many people as possible. This involves filling in a very simple one-page form, which can be obtained from the village shop or by email from the Parish Footpaths Officer, Phil Wood philmo.wood@metronet.co.uk

Forms should be returned to the shop after completion.
If you have any queries, please contact Phil (phone 710844 or email as above).

Please do your bit to help keep this track open.

ALL PROCEEDS IN AID OF ST. MARY'S CHURCH

We have watched the latest exploits of Dame Judi Dench and her cohorts, as they enjoy a second lease of life in The Second Best Marigold Hotel, savoured an excellent supper at the newly opened Lion in Clanville and laughed with Janet Street-Porter at the HCFWI Spring Meeting in Portsmouth Guildhall. At the same meeting our National Chair, Janice Langley, asked us to look forward to the next 100 years, in this our Centenary Year.

However, our speaker this month, Margaret Braddock, took us back to earlier generations, when our forebears believed in making a public display of mourning by wearing black for a year and a day and appropriate jewellery. Margaret's interest in this fascinating subject was triggered 30 years ago by the purchase of a very pretty piece of sentimental and mourning jewellery. Amongst her collection, which we were able to see and touch, were examples of both French & Whitby Jet, bracelets made of human hair - which surprisingly is both strong and elastic - and even vulcanised rubber.

At one time it was a tradition to leave memorial rings to your nearest and dearest and apparently Samuel Pepys left 123 to his friends and family. Thank goodness that tradition has died out!

On a more cheerful note our members were given details of various activities planned for the summer, including a visit to a Lavender Farm near Alton in June where we will finish the afternoon with a cream tea.

Other activities this month included reviewing the latest selection of our reading group, strolling around Enham Alamein and attending the Anton Danebury Group Spring Meeting in Chilbolton.

It is both our Annual & Resolution Meeting on 28th May - 7.30 pm in the Village Hall - but there will still be time for tea and chat.
