We have been very lucky recently in finding a new fosterer and a double pen is currently being installed in her garden. This means that we can take in and re-home two more cats from our lengthy waiting list. We would be happy to speak to anyone else who is interested in fostering. The time commitment is not excessive and all expenses are paid.

We had great fun with our soft toy tombola stalls at both the Worldwide Whitchurch Weekend and St Mary Bourne Fete. The weather was fine for both and although the proceeds from neither were great we always enjoy being out and about meeting the cat-loving public.

Liono, our August cat, is now living in a quiet home in Basingstoke with a single lady.

Mozza is a very large, very placid, middle aged, black and white cat. He has come into care through no fault of his own and is looking for a new home where he will get lots of love and attention. He is rather depressed at the moment and the two highlights of his day are when his pouch of Felix arrives.

Dear Friends,

As a teacher, I am programmed to think of September as a time for new beginnings. This year, that is appropriate for our church life, too. I am becoming aware of a groundswell of energy in all three of our villages and I am praying for a blossoming of ministries right across the Benefice. There are so many opportunities: within our churches it would be lovely to have more volunteers to be sidespeople, to read the lessons, to read the prayers of intercession, to serve at the altar, to be Eucharistic assistants, to sing in the choir, to help with children's work, to be on the coffee rota, to consider training to be a lay leader of worship, to arrange flowers or to be a Holy Duster among other things. Administrative help is always welcome, too. In the wider community there are also lots of possibilities like helping in our village shops, becoming a school governor (if you have the needed skills to fill the vacancies that arise), hearing children read in our schools (subject to the required checks, of course), being involved in the annual fetes, school fund-raising activities and many more. This all sounds very busy and that does reflect how our lives are, both inside and outside the church building. However, there are other things that are also necessary – one is taking time to be still before God and a second is taking time to listen to other people. Into this somewhat traditional mix there is also always a need for the visionary and the ideas person who might challenge us, but who might also be speaking the word to which we most need to pay attention.

Recently I heard someone say, “If my local church wants me to attend and also wants me to give it money, my question is, ‘Why should I give my time and my money to this church?’” This was not a reaction given with disdain, but actually a genuine question which we might do well to consider in our own contexts. It seems to me that our task is both to build up each church congregation to become a confident and visible part of the body of Christ and to reach out into each village community in our calling to care for our neighbour. The way we do the latter will speak volumes about the health of the former.

Yours in Christ,

Nicky

Fifth Sundays

The Churchwardens and Ministry Team have decided to try holding just one service on a fifth Sunday in the hope that this will be an occasion when all congregations will come together under one roof. This month All Saints will host the Benefice Eucharist at 10am. On subsequent fifth Sundays, this service will take place in the other churches in turn. This is for a trial period

PILOTING GROWING BRIDGEBUILDERS

As a rural benefice we have been invited to take part in a pilot of a new training course, Growing Bridgebuilders, which is to run in the autumn of 2015. It is a course designed to train participants in the better handling of tension, disagreement and 'conflict' (in the widest sense) in church life and beyond.

The resource is being written by Bridge Builders, who have been providing similar training for church leaders for nearly 20 years. It will be published jointly with the Church Pastoral Aid Society (CPAS), who have experience with producing similar types of resources, and it will run nationwide.

The overall aim is to help churches better reflect the reconciling purposes of God in the world, and to promote a church culture of handling tensions in a more Christian manner. The course objectives are:

- To transform how participants think about tension and conflict, including thinking more faithfully in keeping with the Christian Gospel;
- To raise participants' awareness of how they approach tension and conflict, how others may approach it differently, and the way our families shape our approach; and
- To equip participants with some practical skills and frameworks for improving how they handle disagreement, tension and conflict, especially in church life (but with relevance to many contexts).

Churchgoers and non-churchgoers are equally welcome to take part. The course will run on four Saturdays, from 9.00am until 1.00pm, on 17th and 24th October and 7th and 28th November.

After each session of the pilot, participants will be asked for their feedback.

The course leaders will be the Revd. David Read, from Abbots Ann, and the Revd. Jenny Ellis, from Laverstoke. Both are Methodist ministers and experienced course leaders.

Please speak to Tim Tayler or Nicky Judd if you would like to know more.

home port on duty as a troop ship. She was not difficult to find, as her funnels reared way above the surrounding buildings. We rushed to her berth to gaze at her; her wartime uniform of drab camouflage paintwork could not diminish her majestic presence as we peered up her enormous sides. There was no security, as the crew were too busy celebrating.

It was dawn before we crawled up the stairs to bed, conscious that we had another leg of our journey to complete that day. Our next stop was Ryde. After the usual meagre supper we headed for the beach. A full moon rose over the Solent and turned the sea to silver, so that we could make out hundreds of small boats ahead of us on the water as we splashed into the surf.

The boat owners must have been hoarding rockets, maroons and flares all through the war, and now these began to crackle and fizz above us as we splashed and giggled, their reflections in the water doubling the spectacle. It was completely spontaneous and disorganised, and all the better for that. I had never seen anything like it in all my childhood. Like kite-flying and bell-ringing, fireworks had been strictly forbidden 'for the duration'. My first and most memorable firework display marked the day when the world turned hopeful again.

COUNTESS OF BRECKNOCK HOSPICE 25th Anniversary Service of Celebration and Remembrance

The service, to be held at St Mary's Church Andover on Sunday 13th September, will be a celebration of all that the Hospice has achieved and acknowledge the support of so many who have helped us to evolve and develop over the past quarter of a century. A perfect opportunity to recognise the dedication of the staff and volunteers and to give thanks to the local community for their tireless fund raising and generous donations.

It is our vision that the Hospice will continue to thrive, to look forward and embrace future changes and challenges in palliative care, whilst always remaining committed to providing compassion and comfort to help each individual patient, their family, friends and carers.

All are welcome to attend the service, which will commence at 3.00pm and be followed by tea and cake.

COUNTRYWOMAN'S CORNER

VJ Day 1945

Just after midnight my sisters and I were blasted awake by ear-shattering bangs and explosions. It was 1945 and we had grown up with nightly air-raids, so - breathless and shaking with fright - we shot out of bed, grabbed our coats and looked around frantically for shelter. Then our landlady appeared in curlers and dressing-gown, delirious with excitement. Mr Attlee, the Prime Minister, had announced at midnight that the war with the Japanese had ended with their surrender. It was August 14th 1945 and six years of war were finally over.

Linking arms, we girls rushed out into the Southampton streets. It was glorious mayhem. The deafening racket came from spontaneous celebrations rocking the whole city as the wonderful news spread like wildfire. The streets were thronged with people dancing, swigging beer, letting off firework, singing whatever song came into their head (mainly 'There'll always be an England' or 'Rule Britannia'), or simply screaming their heads off. Everyone seemed to be on the move, running, jumping or dancing.

Although the streets were teeming with joyously drunken sailors and soldiers, we were not in the least scared among that friendly swaying, chanting throng. I remember holding my breath as a very tipsy sailor shinned up a 60ft flagpole to plant a beer bottle on the top. I recall only one alarming scene, when out of sheer joie de vivre, a crowd overturned a car and set light to it, dancing round this impromptu bonfire and throwing petrol on the flames.

I had never seen anything like it. I was 13 and on my first summer holiday. With the war in Europe over and the roads finally free of long columns of military vehicles, my elder sisters and I decided to cycle from our home in Sussex to the Isle of Wight, staying in youth hostels - where bunk beds and basic ration were available for 5 shillings a night - along the way. We were staying at one such place in Southampton the night the war ended.

Earlier that day we'd pedalled wearily down The Avenue, the devastation from earlier air-raids stretching as far as we could see. Almost every building had been flattened, with only the odd wall or chimney still upright, except for the old Bargate standing square and defiant, symbolising the city's survival.

It's the sounds of VJ Day that I'll never forget. The thundering booms and guttural whoops rising above the cheering in the streets as every ship in that naval town hooted its siren in triumph. Even one ship giving tongue is a mighty sound, but to hear dozens all at once is the most awe-inspiring peace-time noise.

Soaring above them all, and drawing us down to the dockside was the deep bass voice of the Queen Mary, the largest liner in the world, just back in her

ST LUKE THE STORYTELLER

On Advent Sunday the new Church year begins and it will be the Year of Luke, when many of the Sunday readings will be taken from his Gospel account of the life of Jesus. Sunday 18th October is St Luke's Day. This gives me an opportunity to attempt something I have long wanted to do and that is to read a whole Gospel out loud in one sitting. In our Sunday services, we hear small portions of Scripture, but do not get the full impact of the whole Gospel. It is this latter that I would like us to experience. Please join me at All Saints' Church in Upper Clatford at 3.00pm on 18th October to hear how St Luke unfolds his story of Jesus. There will be tea in the Meadow Room afterwards and, for those who wish, Evensong follows at 6.00pm. I am hoping that you will be able to support this event not only with your presence, but also with a donation. All proceeds will be shared, with half going to the Benefice churches and half to the Countess of Brecknock Hospice in Andover.

house before suddenly turning back to the field and swooping down towards the other bird that is now in the middle of the field. The second bird is black - a crow I think. Both birds then fly off in different directions and I can only surmise that they were fighting over food - some unsuspecting rodent or small bird. It is all over very quickly, leaving me under the deepening midnight blue of the sky, to marvel at the wonders of nature.

APPLE DAY

SATURDAY 3RD OCTOBER 2.00PM ONWARDS

WAR MEMORIAL HALL, ABBOTTS ANN

Apple Cake competition Bring your specially-baked apple cake and enter the competition for the best. (two competitions - 12 years and under; 13+ - including adults of course) Please bring it to the Hall by 12.00 noon for judging.

Apple juice! Bring along your container (any size) and fill it from the mega-press.

What about the children? Children (under supervision!) love to press their own apples on the small-scale press. Lots of games for children too.

Apples become cider Bring your own container (any size) labelled with your name and fill with juice from the mega-press. Hand it to Tim Abram (he of the shop), who will be nearby. He'll answer any questions, write you a ticket, and ask you to pay 50p per litre to cover the cost of production (no profit to him!). Around 14th-28th November call at the Village Shop to collect your cider (80% of the volume you handed over). It will be still (not fizzy) farmhouse cider. Quality and taste can't be guaranteed as they depend on the varieties used to make the juice.

Chatting with Lisa and Robbie about caring for your apple trees Lisa and Robbie Morgan own a small orchard in the village and will be around to talk with anyone who would like to know more about care of apple trees. Look out for them!

Have you got apples you'd like collecting? The whole idea of Apple Day is that not one single Abbots Ann apple goes to waste. So please bring yours along. If you have more than you can manage to transport, contact Bernard Griffiths on 710279 or email him on rosemarygroves@btinternet.com, and he will turn up with his trusty trailer.

Cakes for tea Lots of hungry people come to Apple Day and we depend on the generosity and skill of the village cake bakers (experienced or first-timers) to bring along a cake or two for tea. If you can make a contribution, please contact Jo Dixon on 710458 or email her on Joanna.dixon@actionhants.org.uk or jo_david@talktalk.net. You will be rewarded by the satisfied looks on the faces of lots of villagers!

LIFE WITH THE TRIBE - JULY 2015

July 1st is glorious. The morning brings clear, blue skies and the promise of the hottest day of the year. I love days like this although they are too few in the UK and I wish that the Tribe were not at school. Early in the day our garden birds are feeding, but as the warmth increases they stay in the shade as much as possible. Not so for our overseas visitors. The swifts, house martins and swallows love the heat as it ensures an abundant supply of flying insects. They soar high over the fields and are a delight to watch although it can often be easy to confuse them. The highest, fastest and largest fliers are the swifts who, in fact, are part of another family. They even sleep as they fly. Swifts can be seen flying in flocks but never perched. They are plain brown all over, often appearing black when they are high in the sky, with a pale throat, their tail is a short fork and their wings are long and scythe like. I think that swallows are the easiest to recognise with their glossy, blue black backs, white belly and underwings, red throat and long forked tail. They are the lowest of the fliers and delight the Tribe in the pool as they swoop down to take a quick drink! They are also the birds that we see lined up on telegraph wires chattering away to each other. Finally, house martins although similar to swallows with their blue black head and white underbelly, their neck is white and their tail is a short fork. House martins fly in between the high swifts and the low swallows. All of them are an utter joy - one of our favourite summer sights and on this first day of July they are in abundance above the field.

This hot and sultry day is deliciously long and languid. When I collect the Boy from the station in the early evening, his sun-kissed face is beaming with pride as he presents me with a good sized, freshly caught trout! Not bad for an afternoon learning to fly fish! It is barbecued a couple of days later and is utterly delicious. School is not just about academia!!

Despite the arrival of high temperatures, one of our ash trees is only just coming into flower. It is a bizarre sight with the rest of the garden and hedgerows a dark, lush green. The field is full of grasses and wild flowers, but the dreaded ragwort is pushing through and early in the month, Father of the Tribe has the field topped. The Tribe are furious as they love the pathway that is cut up to the top of the field - the perfect spot for watching the sun go down. As they walk along it, dozens of butterflies fly up around them. But they don't have to do battle with ragwort and taking it down before it flowers will prevent it from self seeding. And the meadow grasses and flowers will return quickly enough. Lavender has also grown magnificently this year and with it, we are delighted to see that with the profusion of lavender flowers, dozens of bees appear. Occasionally, we find one that is utterly exhausted, so we carefully carry it out of harm's way, and putting it on a lavender flower in order that its energy can return.

The most extraordinary thing that I see this month happens one evening while it is just about still light. Alongside the edge of the field behind the house, I notice two largish birds having a bit of a kerfuffle. As one flies towards the house, I realise that it's a barn owl. It swoops silently, low and close to the

ABBOTTS ANN VISION COUNTRYSIDE GROUP

This year has been a busy one for the Countryside Group.

Two nature walks were held: in May we visited Bridge Meadow to see the damp-loving plants growing in the old water meadows and also looked at the numerous species of wild plants in the churchyard wildflower meadow and in the churchyard itself, and in July we enjoyed a walk through fields at the edge of the village, full of late summer flowers and butterflies. In May a well-attended evening footpath walk took us around some of our local paths.

Two further visits were made to the local cress beds, courtesy of Ron Bainbridge and Vitacress: in June we were given the low-down on the history and practice of watercress growing, and in July we learnt about stream ecology and observed some of the local moths and bats.

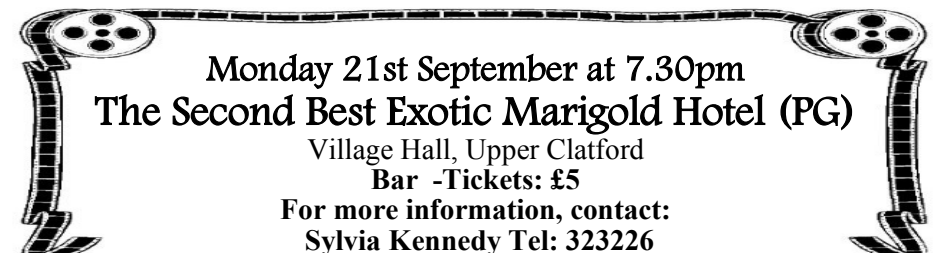

Also in June, on a guided visit to Saxley Farm, Matthew Read gave us a fascinating insight into arable farming and the machinery involved in this. We also saw his biomass boiler and a solar farm with the panels underplanted with a carpet of wild flowers.

In the meantime, work has continued in conjunction with HCC on the lengthy process of getting the Old Coach Road recorded on the definitive map as a right of way. Thanks to all those who filled in forms giving evidence of usage over many years. A permissive path from the garden centre to the Hexagon, which will provide a safe and pleasant route into Andover for pedestrians and also link up with other local paths, is in the process of establishment and it is hoped to open it within the next month; please look out for notices of an inaugural walk on the village email and on posters. The possibility of another permissive path from Abbots Ann Down through Saxley Farm is under discussion.

We have also been looking after the churchyard wildflower meadow, in conjunction with the Fun Club and Abbots Ann Green Action.

Your small Countryside Group committee cannot however continue this level of activity without more help. So, if you have enjoyed any of last year's and this year's activities, please consider whether you could lend a hand. We would particularly like to hear from anyone who would be willing to organise an indoor meeting in autumn 2016 (email julie.moon@care4free.net).

FOR SALE, WANTED, OR SERVICES IN ABBOTTS ANN ON FACEBOOK!

A new Facebook group has been set up for the Abbotts Ann community. The group called, 'For Sale, Wanted, or Services in Abbotts Ann' is for people in and around Abbotts Ann who have things to sell such as child car seats or bikes that are too big for Ebay, or they would simply like to sell their items locally. It is also a place to post when you are after something - for example a post could be; 'Does anyone in the village have a spare suitcase I could borrow for my holiday this year!'

The group is also a place to advertise services like child minding, gardening, dog walking - available or wanted. It is also the ideal place to advertise local events - like art classes, jumble sales or concerts.

We believe an online group like this could be ideal for Abbotts Ann. These sites have proven popular and successful in other local villages and so we wanted to give it a try! It is free to use, free to post on and good way of connecting with our community.

Just go to Facebook and search for: For Sale, Wanted, or Services in Abbotts Ann or use this URL: www.facebook.com/groups/122577861418805/

As a reward for reading our very long article in the last edition, this month I will be brief and to the point.

The Supper Club went further afield and met at The Plough in Sparsholt and enjoyed excellent food on a warm summer's evening. It was a very busy venue and we had our own little room - maybe our reputation goes before us as we can be quite raucous. A few days later the more sedate Lunch Club met at the Abbots Mitre in Chilbolton and enjoyed catching up with all their news.

This month's meeting was a social evening in the form of a beetle drive and our demon dice thrower with the highest score was Cecilia Cotton. Later in the evening there was champagne and cake to celebrate this year's centenary of the WI in the UK.

It will be a question of "where did you get that hat" at this month's meeting, as The Clothes Shop in Newbury are going to share The History of Hats with us. Date: 24th September 2015. Time 7.30 pm. Venue: Abbots Ann Village Hall.

CLATFORD VALLEY GARDENING CLUB

David Beeson, who has spoken at our meetings in the past, was luckily able to step in when the booked speaker was unable to attend. He talked on the same topic, namely, 'Wild Flowers on your Doorstep.' Firstly, he outlined the importance of local geology, and hence soils, on the distribution of wild plants. Chalky soils, common in our area, are very thin and lack humus, and plants that can thrive under these conditions are known as "calcicoles" and include rock roses, fine grasses, birdsfoot trefoil and wild Clematis (Old Man's Beard). Water in these areas is often in short supply, so rock roses, for example grow near to the ground, have a thick, small leaves and a small number of stomata (pores), all of which cut down the rate of water loss. Juniper, hawthorn and blackthorn can also survive under these conditions. Chalk supports several species of orchid such as the Spotted Orchid and The Pyamidal Orchid, orchids can in fact be seen at Picket Twenty around the A303. On the top of some chalk hills are found clay soils which form when acidic rain washes out the calcium carbonate, trees growing in these areas include Sycamore, Oak and wild pear and apple (there is one wild pear on Danebury Hill)

In the valleys are waterlogged areas, where again plants show adaptations to these particular circumstances. Here there is no shortage of water so the leaves of many plants bear numerous stomata on their upper, exposed surface. The water crowfoot lives in fast moving rivers and streams, and has very fine leaves which reduces friction and it holds its flowers well above the surface of the water. Examples of woodland plants in the area: dog's mercury, wood sorrel and primroses.

David emphasised the importance of wild plants to wildlife. For example caterpillars are only able to feed off plants if they have the ability to detoxify the toxins found within a plant. Thus if a plant species disappears so does the butterfly or moth that feeds on it. In fact all wild plants contain toxins but often in very small amounts. The two most toxic British plants are Deadly Nightshade and Monkshood. Throughout the talk he gave numerous examples of where many of these plants can be seen locally, so we all need to keep our eyes open.

At the end of the evening he was thanked for filling in at short notice and giving such an interesting talk.

Since the June meeting there as been a successful BBQ and a visit to Hidcote Gardens. An evening visit to The Hyde, Old Alresford is planned for September.

Meetings talk place in upper Clatford Village Hall at 7.45 pm. The September Meeting is on the 23rd when Thomas Stone will talk on Mottsifont Roses and their Underplanting. Everybody welcome.
